The Castle Markets.

The market at Montreal on January 29 was glutted, says the Gazette, with common and inferior beef cattle, and the selling interests are greatly depressed and lower prices prevail all round, with pretty good stock at from 3½ to 3½ per pound, but much the large number of sales made were at about 3c, and a large number will only bring from 2 to 2½c, per pound. Calves of inferior quality were more numerous, and they brought lower prices, but good weal are still searce and high priced. The price to-day ranged from $1.50 to $12.00 esch. Good lambs are in demand at advancing rates, while the other sorts hold their prices fairly well, Good lambs bring from 4 to 4 1-2c, per lb. The Jondon sable of January 29 says. As the immediate heir to the threne, an in view of the uncertainty as to the iff course of the Car, it has seen the policy of Alexander III. to keep the Carrowite from any dangerou, or even public post duty. This seconds, in the main, for the fact that as it little is known of the your man, who is now, by the way, a few meath over 25 years of age.

NOT A BRILLIANT MAN

Trath be told, there is very little about the young man to attract attention, aside from the position as the eldest son of the Car The Grand Duke, in fact, is a very colorie-outh indeed. He looks strength mentally and physically. He has shewn to talent for anything of cosmogeneous. There is neither of the Tarter about him. He is not at all tensors of in appearance. These men have nearly all of them been of the most impressive appearance. The mad Emprery, Paul was a fine leaking man. He massive imperial cross of Russia and the flawing robes of Soate have looked imperators of Russia, but the effect will be different where they are put to make the resemble of Russia, but the effect will be different where they are put to my the somewhat pany Grand Duke.

But this is not the worst. The Czar might fergive his sen his weak physique and Dulan face. There is worse. The Czarowitz is inclined to be a liberal; and in the eres of the Czar this is a crime against Ressia and against him.

HIS LIEBRALISM OPPOSED.

Alexander III. cannot understand liberal sm. He never admired the somewhat itbaral ideas of his father, and he can adderstand still less those of his son. He is to be peetition of a beau who has hatches out duskings which will take to the water.

The young Grand Dake disagrees with the father in may essentials. He temperment is that of a scholar, and his inters have made him a very fair one. The Cardeen not like tcholars in the abstract. He has to have them about him in certain positions, but he would be better pleased if no could do without them.

THE CZAR'S FIRECE TEMPER

But prhaps the widest breach between the Carrewitz and his father is on the Juvita quarties. They come man does no believe in prescuting the Juws et in drivin, them from Rassia. These are other points of difference between the opinions of the Carr and these of his son, but have to make many and the son, but have to temper, which will not brook oppositions may are ufficient to care bits to look upon the son as a wilful, fracileus boy, see fit to the son as a wilful, fracileus boy, see fit to

Than Grand Dake Nichelas would be able to put his advanced tides into five should be ome into power to morrow there is small reason to believe. He has absorbed some liberal ideas from his taters, but he is met in any way a forwful or a strong young man. He such reconceful, has no special select for affairs, and would be a weak figure in the hands of the strong body of graveless who may arrund Alexander.

Take its all in all, the young heir to the Russian threes compres a possiliar position. The heir of this father, he is yet district. The heir of this father, he is yet districted by him. This latter quality has made him popula with all parties in the Rassian court, eve including those we look upon him as a versat figure tided to support the weight the Rassian Crown—as he may some day the Rassian Crown—as he may some day the has a correla grace and tast that count him from his clover Danish mether and neron his crossgraised father. He is mor of a schelar than met of the Russian me of rask are, but is both modest and simple of manner. Tuvers whom he has had frot time to time have reported of him that the amilability he above in public is not a saumed.

In the schoolreem he was the same. He always met his unters half way in their effects to impreve him. He was never charlish, nor did he display any of the "spoiled child" qualities that might have been looked for in young man el his pertitor. Not especially quick to learn, he was willing and patient, it was from one of those tuters that the Grand Duke imbibed the ideas which made in G-man rather than Fresnch in his testes and sympathies, contersy to what would have been the whate of his father, had the latter known anything of the matter.

AN ADMIRER OF TOLETOL

Still, the young man is fairly well versed in French literature as well as German, and, unlike his rather, he is an admirer of Taktes and of the voonger writers of the merry Rassian period who are pushing to the fam. He is raid to exert little for heavy reading of a political or historical character. He has a test for perty and, fiction, and in this again he is like his metter, for Atz-xeder III. has no litting for that cost of rearing, or indeed ner any winer.

Newspaper literature is served on him sparingly. The Cast's press occurs are a realens let, and must do something to earn their wag-s. When they come across an their wag-s. When they come across an English newspaper, for instance, of an outsp-ken obseracier they give its queer over-hunling before it guess to the inture Czar. The result is that he knows only in a fragmentary way of a good deal that is going on in the world outside his father's palace.

NOT PARTIAL TO WAR.

As might be expected from a mild-man need young man, the Carowitz is no partial to war, as seen so his coréathet have been. There is nothing of the Don Cossack in him. He has n ambition to crosh the Turks or te wage we with Austria or with England on the Retern frectier. Last week we had a paragraph expressing a hope that Mr. R. J. Noxon would guard the P. P. A.'s. better than he did the Virden colored bar er some time ago, and now "Ifvot." R. L. Jones of that town threatens us with libel. If Jones has been under Mr. Noxon's care and did not escape, then his ground for action, insimusting that he did, might be good. If he has not been under Mr. Noxon's key, then our paragraph can have no reference to him and we may escape scott free. For the professor's information was may say our reference was to a gentleman named Goyette.

Mr. Luxten's new daily paper. The Nor Wester, made its first appearance on Saturday. The paper is large and typographically a very near patiently a very near patiently a very near the Toronto banquet, and a langthy report of the budget and Mr. Davidson's able reply. Despite the speculation as to mability to secure presside patches the paper is well represented in the telegraphic. As a newspaper its makeup is excellent, and its position politically independent. From genular appearances it eight specific to secure a wide circulation, but we would like to sec it better patronized by advertisers. The public will always find it for sale as the Man. Book Store

The Academy.

The Academy.

The meeting at the Academy on Friday evening was, in some respects a success. The programme was, for the most part, impromptu. All present seemed to be pleased, and each one seemed to enjoy the company of the others. Nevertheless there was a noticeable lack of finish in the presentation of some of the items on the bill of fare. This was especially the case as regards the music furnished. If we may not expect claburate preparation we should at least expect careful selection and this will doubtless be attended to in tuture. Any deficiencies in the muscal line would doubtless be fully explained by the absence of the efficient leader of the orchestra, Mr. Fison.

The Academy "Times" was read by the Editor Mr. Hannsh and was much enjoyed by all. Perhaps we ought to say that it was enjoyed by most inasmuch as the paper contained not a few cuts at deserving parties which could not wall have been enjoyed by them. Some of these hits were so good that we may in some future issue give a few selections from the pages of our contemporary.

The British Grain Trade.

The British Grain Trade.

The London cable of January 27 says:
The weather has been favorable for crops generally and promising for wheat during the past week. The French demand has practically cased, owing to the delay in imposing the new duties. The United Kingdom demand has not improved, and prices were nominally unchanged. California atloat was queted at 25s. 31; spot was slow at previous rates; the country markets were easier. Flour duil and parily weak, with prices unchanged. Cern, near cargoes were firm and furly active and dearer. For American there was a fair enquiry at a turn dearer; the new crop was quoted at 18c; spot was steady and quiet. Barley, slow, owing the cold weather, and is now quiet at 5d. 4 vance; spot was firm at an advance; country markets quieter. Outs, firm and dearer; spot was firm and the country markets firmer.
